Alyssa Karotkin (Statoil)

Alyssa is a native Houstonian, who grew up with a dad in the oil business, making regular moves between Houston, Midland, Lafayette, and Dallas. She went to Duke University for undergrad and remains a devoted college basketball fan. She got her law degree from the University of Texas and then clerked for federal judges in Austin and Philadelphia, before joining Statoil in 2008. Most of her time at Statoil has been as a landman working the US GoM; however, she's also worked oil and gas projects in Canada and the Bahamas. (Yes, she did get to make a work trip to the Bahamas!) A little over a year ago she starting working on the commercial aspects of US offshore wind. She's here now to tell you "The Story of US Offshore Wind".
